Property Disputes

The Law Office of Michael J. Davis has experience in all facets of real estate litigation and property disputes. Disputes can arise over boundary lines, easements, rights-of-way, land use, and with home improvement contractors. While mediation and negotiation are valid and effective options, if settlement cannot be reached, our office is prepared to diligently litigate your property dispute in court. We also resolve lien, tax lien, and mechanics' lien matters.

Adverse Possession

If you have been occupying and utilizing land for more than twenty-one years without the title to land or owner's permission, Ohio law gives you the right to possibly obtain a court order deeding the property to you. Our office has aggressively represented clients seeking to resolve land ownership and land use issues resulting from use or conditions.

Conveyances Gone Bad

Real estate transactions can go bad in many ways, including nondisclosure of defects or other important issues related to the property and financing. Contingencies can be put into a purchase and sale agreement (buy and sell agreement), but if they are not satisfied in good faith, the transaction can be terminated prior to closing. If structural deficiencies are discovered during a property inspection, repairs may be needed or the contract could be cancelled. If you want to buy a home, building, or land, you need knowledgeable representation before formally entering into that agreement. Don't go it alone. Let the Law Office of Michael J. Davis bring their knowledge to your assistance.

Lease Disputes

Many times, a dispute over a rental property lease can be resolved before going to court. Security deposits and your rights can be an issue. At the Law Office of Michael J. Davis, we have assisted in mediating these disputes before costly and time-consuming litigation is filed. We will attempt to resolve any issues of residential or commercial rental before they get to trial.
